NON-COMMERCIAL LICENSE DESCRIPTIONS AND ROYALTY RATES Each song has two copyrights: a copyright in the composition and a copyright in the sound recording. A musical composition is the notes and lyrics of the song. A sound recording, also known as a master recording, is a recording artist's version of the composition. Even if the recording artist is also the songwriter, two copyrights are created. If you wish to create your own recording of the composition, you only need to license the composition. If you wish to license a recording artist's version of the composition for your project, you must license the composition and the master recording. The rates for both are listed separately below.
